Nutter delivers his spending plan in silence

Mayor Michael Nutter leaves City Council chambers after giving his annual budget address. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

On a budget. Nutter plans to extend library schedules and add 31 new L&I inspectors.

Mayor Michael Nutter delivered his $4.5 billion spending plan for 2015 on Thursday morning in City Council Chambers, which in itself was an accomplishment.

At last year's address, local union members booed, hissed and yelled when Nutter took to the microphone to unveil his 2014 spending plan. Nutter eventually left council chambers mid-speech.

Previous reports indicated that for this year's event, union members were not permitted to enter council chambers unless previously invited. Some were eventually allowed in to the upstairs balcony, but were told to keep it peaceful or they would be tossed out. And visitors were told to leave their signs at the door.

Nutter's budget fore-casted no tax increases and set aside funding for future union negotiations. But other than new L&I employees and extension of the Free Library's weekly schedule, no major new initiatives were introduced.

Nutter said he was satisfied that the white collar city workers union, District Council 47, accepted a new contract Wednesday night for its roughly 3,600 workers. The 8-year deal is worth $122 million.

And he asked the blue collar union, DC 33, which represents close to 9,000 workers, to work with him to reach a deal.

Members of DC 33 started protesting outside City Hall Thursday hours before Nutter was slated to speak and protested the mayor's elusiveness in negotiations.

Nutter said he set aside $44.3 million for potential obligations with DC33, Local 22 Firefighters, Lodge 5 Police union and DC 45 for 2015. The main hurdles seem to be health care and pensions costs, as well as work rules.

For the Free Library $2.5M

The mayor called for a reinstating the six-day-a-week schedule for the Free Library of Philadelphia. An additional $200,000 will buy more books.

For L&I $2M

The Department of Licenses and Inspections will receive 31 new inspectors and supportive staff.

To CCP $500K

To help offset tuition increases

The rest? $75M

The schools asked for $75 million in recurring funds to fund district-managed and charter schools. Nutter has assumed that Harrisburg will approve his $2-a-pack cigarette tax. It was already approved by City Council, but it requires state approval. Nutter said it would generate $83 million in education funding assuming a July 1 start date. As smoking rates inevitably decline, Nutter still expects the tax to raise at least $70 million.

Nutter was proud of the conditional deal to sell the Philadelphia Gas Works to ULL Holdings Corp. for $1.86 billion.

After paying off dues and debts, the city hopes to be left with about $700 million; between $420 million and $630 million will go toward paying off the city's bloated pension fund, which currently stands at more than $5 billion.

Oops. 'Massage parlor' employee arrested for offering sex to cop

Police have charged a woman with prostitution after an undercover officer took a visit to a massage parlor near the border of Northeast Philadelphia and Bucks County.

Jennifer Bruzas, 26, of Tacony, is charged with prostitution, solicitation and massage without license.

Bruzas was allegedly working at Renew Beauty Day Spa at 12003 Roosevelt

Bldv. on Wednesday when an undercover officer investigating complaints of prostitution at the spa dating back to February entered the spa, which was also a massage parlor.

The officer was allegedly offered sex in exchange for money by Bruzas, at which point she was arrested and charged.

Drunken driver slams into cop car

A man has been charged with driving under the influence after he crashed into a parked car and a police sport-utility vehicle in North Philadelphia early Thursday.

A Philadelphia police officer sustained minor injuries in the accident at 11th and Cumberland streets.

The police officer was sitting in a parked police SUV when the allegedly drunken driver, heading the wrong way on Cumberland in a red minivan, struck a parked car. The minivan bounced off the parked car before striking the occupied police SUV.

The injured police officer was on Thursday being treated for back pain. METRO

Man gets five years for ripping off homeowners

Jail time. Edward McCusker and his wife were involved in an elaborate mortgage fraud scheme.

The man behind an alleged mortgage fraud scheme was sentenced on Thursday to five years for targeting homeowners with financial problems and tricking them into signing their dwindling savings away.

Edward G. McCusker, 49, of Chesterbrook in Bucks County, was convicted June 22, 2011, along with his wife Jacqueline McCusker, 49, of mail fraud, wire fraud and conspiracy to commit money laundering, along with other charges.

Jacqueline McCusker was sentenced to a year of home confinement followed by three years of probation.

McCusker was ordered to forfeit $400,000 and a pay a fine of $12,500 and after sentence must undergo three years of supervised release.

Codefendant John Bariana pleaded guilty and is awaiting sentencing. The partners behind Bennett & Doherty, a law firm which participated in the fraud, were also convicted of related charge. Jeffrey Bennett pleaded guilty and will be sentenced Friday; Stephen Doherty pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a year in prison.

The details

- The McCuskers and Bariana obtained 35 fraudulent mortgage loans worth more than $10 million.

- Homeowners were told their homes would be saved with "investors." But the McCuskers transferred the homeowners' payments into their own bank accounts.

Duo charged in armed bank
robberies

Two Lancaster men were hit with armed bank robbery charges, said the U.S. Department of Justice, after the duo robbed a Berks County bank at gunpoint and tried to rob another bank in York County.

Kyle Costello, 27, and Matthew Hill, 29, were further charged with conspiracy to commit armed bank robbery, carrying and using a firearm and aiding and abetting.

The two robbed a National Penn Bank, armed with weapons, on Lancaster Pike in Shillington on Nov. 7 last year. A month later, on Dec. 6, both tried to rob Susquehanna Bank on East Market Street in York.

The men face at least seven years in prison and a fine of up to $1 million. METRO

ID. Burka-wearing suspect charged in dice-game slaying

Trial for suspects who allegedly shot a 19-year-old man to death in 2008 over a dice game gone bad is scheduled to continue Friday.

Jamil Banks, 30, and Quentin Salmond, 28, are charged with the murder of Kenneth Wiggins, 19, on Saturday, April 12, 2008 — a bloody weekend when five other men were murdered around the city.

Bernard Salmond, 29, Quentin's brother, is also charged with the murder for allegedly driving a getaway vehicle. His case is severed and will go to trial later this month.

Joan Hill, a businesswoman on the block, testified Thursday that she called police when she saw a vehicle pull over at the corner of Chew and Landsdowne avenues and a man get out wearing female Islamic clothing.

Prosecutor Peter Lim played a 911 tape of Hill's call to a skeptical operator, in which Hill said, "They left the car running. I don't know if they're gonna rob someone. ... You need to send a police officer because something's going to happen!"

In a second 911 call made minutes later, Hill can be heard shouting,

Roll of the dice

Lim said the motive for the murder was revenge.

- Quentin Salmond allegedly won cash in a dice game from Kenneth Wiggins, but Wiggins strong-armed Salmond and took the money back.
- Salmond and Banks allegedly spotted Wiggins outside a diner.
- They allegedly ambushed him as he left.

"They're shooting! ... I told them they was gonna rob somebody!"

Hill did not see the actual shooting, which occurred down Chew Avenue outside the Skyline Diner.

In surveillance footage played at trial, Wiggins is seen being jumped from behind, allegedly by Banks, after leaving the diner. Salmond, who was allegedly wearing a burka, then ran up and allegedly fatally shot Wiggins once in the chest, before both fled to the car.

USS Truxtun

US Navy ship en route to Black Sea for pre-planned exercises

The USS Truxtun, a U.S. Navy guided-missile destroyer, is heading to the Black Sea for what the U.S. military on Thursday described as a "routine" deployment that was scheduled well before the crisis in Ukraine.

The announcement came a day after the Pentagon unveiled plans to put more U.S. fighter jets on a NATO air patrol mission in the Baltics, moving to reassure allies alarmed by Russia's effective seizure of the Ukrainian peninsula of Crimea.

Crimea is home to Russia's Black Sea military base in Sevastopol.

The U.S. Navy said in a statement that the Truxtun left Greece on Thursday en route to the Black Sea and would conduct training with Romanian and Bulgarian naval forces.

"While in the Black Sea, the ship will conduct a port visit and routine, previously planned exercises with allies and partners in the region," the Navy said in a statement, without offering additional details. REUTERS

Crimea votes to join Russia, Obama orders sanctions

Decision. The Crimean parliament moved "to enter into the Russian Federation" amid growing concerns.

Crimea's parliament voted to join Russia on Thursday and its Moscow-backed government set a referendum in 10 days' time in a dramatic escalation of the crisis over the Ukrainian region that drew a sharp riposte from U.S. President Barack Obama.

Obama ordered sanctions on those responsible for Moscow's military intervention in Ukraine, including bans on travel to the United States and freezing of their U.S. assets.

He echoed European Union leaders and the pro-Western government in Ukraine in declaring that the proposed referendum would violate international law.

The sudden acceleration of moves to bring Crimea, which has an ethnic Russian majority and has effectively been seized by Russian forces, formally under Moscow's rule came as EU leaders held an emergency summit groping for ways to pressure Russia to back down and accept mediation.

The EU condemned Russian actions in Crimea as illegal, voiced support for Ukraine's territorial integrity but took only minor steps suspending talks with Moscow on visas and a new investment pact while warning of tougher steps if there is no negotiated solution within a short period.

In a signal to Moscow, Obama announced plans to punish Russians and Ukrainians involved in what he called "threatening the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Ukraine." A U.S. official said Russian President Vladimir Putin was not on the list of those to be sanctioned.

"The proposed referendum on the future of Crimea would violate the Ukrainian constitution and violate international law," Obama told reporters at the White House. REUTERS

Crimean appeal

Putin goes head-to-head with West

Almost certainly orchestrated by Vladimir Putin, Crimea's appeal to join Russia pits the president directly against the West in a standoff that has increasingly high stakes.

The vote gives Putin the upper hand in the crisis over Ukraine, but risks antagonizing pro-Western leaders in Kiev who have refused to resort to military action or fan tensions in Ukraine's south and east.

"We are at a very dangerous point, and it threatens to push a political crisis in the direction of a military situation," said former Kremlin spin doctor Gleb Pavlovsky.

Ukraine's leaders had no doubt who was behind the latest moves in Crimea, including a call for a referendum to decide if the Ukrainian Black Sea peninsula, which has an ethnic Russian majority, should return to its former Soviet master. REUTERS

Sex crimes. US Army general admits to lesser counts in trial

A U.S. Army general pleaded guilty on Thursday to military crimes of having an adulterous affair, seeking nude photos of junior officers and possessing pornography while deployed in Afghanistan, his lawyers said.

Brig. Gen. Jeffrey Sinclair, the defendant in a rare court-martial against a top U.S. military officer, will continue to fight charges that he sexually assaulted a female captain during their three-year relationship.

Even though Sinclair said the affair was consensual, he agreed that it was inappropriate.

"I was a senior leader; she was a subordinate leader," he told the court.

His guilty plea delayed lawyers' opening statements, which had been scheduled to begin on Thursday at Fort Bragg, N.C. REUTERS

The charges

The jury of five, two-star generals will decide the one-star general's guilt on the remaining charges

- The U.S. government alleges Sinclair, 51, a married father of two sons, twice forced an unmarried captain 17 years his junior to perform oral sex.

- Prosecutors say he used his superior rank to prevent the woman from ending their sexual relationship and threatened to kill her or her family if she exposed the affair.

RUSSIA'S RULES

During a summer in Moscow 15 years ago, I had some interesting experiences with the Russians. I went through Lenin's tomb, and saw the champion of Marxism in all his waxy glory. I went to the theater and took in a comedy. At least I think it was a comedy. I could barely understand a word, but the audience roared as if Stalin were doing stand-up. And I almost accidentally bought a cat. Don't ask, but a word to the wise: two rubles is too much.

The incident I've been thinking about the most lately, however, involved an interview with a Russian general. I can't recall his name, so I'll play the odds and call him Vladimir. We were chatting about the economic challenges of his country's move into free markets and privatization when I let slip with this diplomatic gem: "Well, it must be difficult," I said, "after all, Russia was once a superpower..."

Gen. Vlad sat up so suddenly his medals rattled, his eyes blazing beneath a caterpillar unibrow, and he said, "Russia is still a superpower!"

Whatever you may think of the Russian military's incursion/invasion/getaway weekend in Ukraine, this is something to be remembered: President Putin's seizure of Crimea fits perfectly into his vision of Russian rights and power, even if the world says he needs glasses. His Black Sea Fleet relies on the Crimean port of Sevastopol. Sixty percent of Crimea's population speaks Russian as a first language. And Crimea was part of Russia for 300 years before it was given to Ukraine in 1954. In Putin's mind, the peninsula is apparently a kind of geo-political time-share condo; it was rented to some friends for a while, but now spring break is coming and the owners want it back.

Much of the planet may see flaws in this logic, but that won't make it go away. Simply put, like Gen. Vladimir in that testy interview so long ago, the Russians believe that they are right. And any attempt to end the standoff will have to proceed with that Red Square reasoning in mind.

Apple loses bid for US ban on Samsung sales

A judge on Thursday rejected Apple's request for a permanent sales ban in the United States against some older Samsung smartphones, a key setback for the iPhone maker in its global patent battle.

District Judge Lucy Koh in San Jose, Calif., ruled that Apple had not presented enough evidence to show that its patented features were a significant enough driver of consumer demand to warrant an injunction.

Apple was awarded more than $900 million by U.S. juries, but the iPhone maker has failed to sustain a permanent sales ban against its rival, a far more serious threat to Samsung, which earned $7.7 billion last quarter.

Three third-graders were caught smoking marijuana in the boys' bathroom of their northern California elementary school last week in what the local police chief says marked the youngest pot bust he has ever encountered.

Witness feared Pistorius might kill himself after shooting his girlfriend Violent. The prosecution has portrayed Pistorius as a gun-obsessed hothead.

One of the first people on the scene after Oscar Pistorius shot girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp told a court on Thursday he feared the Olympic and Paralympic star, now on trial for murder, might kill himself with the same gun.

Testifying on the fourth day of the trial, neighbor

Johan Stipp said he entered the athlete's home, minutes after hearing screams and shots, to find the distraught South African sprinter kneeling over the lifeless body of a woman.

Stipp, a doctor, went on to describe his futile attempts to revive Steenkamp.

As Stipp checked Steenkamp for signs of life, Pistorius was begging him to save her life, Stipp told the court.

"Oscar was crying all the time. He prayed to God: 'Please let her live, she must not die,'" he said.

Pope Francis popular in US, but Catholicism is stagnant

Religion. A study found that Catholics love the new pope, but there's no sign they are going to Mass more often.

One year after his election, Pope Francis is "immensely popular among American Catholics," a survey said on Thursday, but there is no sign of a "Francis effect" inspiring more to attend Mass or do volunteer work.

The Washington-based Pew Research Center said 85 percent of Catholics in the United States viewed the Argentine-born pontiff favorably, with 51 percent reporting a "very favorable" view of him, while only 4 percent expressed a negative opinion.

According to Catholics, 68 percent thought

Francis admits stealing cross

Pope Francis revealed on Thursday he had succumbed to "that thief in all of us" and broke the seventh commandment by stealing a small cross from the coffin of a priest so he could remember the man.

In off-the-cuff comments to Roman priests, Francis said he took it when he went to the funeral of an elderly priest he admired. REUTERS

he represented "a major change for the better," a view shared by 51 percent of the non-Catholics responding to the poll in telephone interviews of 1,340 Americans from Feb. 14 to 23.

But the poll also found the rock-star status of the pope, whose simple style has attracted record crowds to the Vatican and won Time magazine's Man of the Year title for 2013, has not clearly translated into greater lay participation in the church since his surprise election on March 13, 2013.

"There has been no measurable rise in the percentage of Americans who identify as Catholic," the survey said. "Nor has there been a statistically significant change in how often Catholics say they go to Mass."

Forty percent of Catholics said they were now praying more often and 26 percent were "more excited" about their faith, but their frequency of going to confession or volunteering at church has not changed.

"If there has been a 'Francis effect,' it has been most pronounced among Catholics who already were highly committed to the practice of their faith," the survey concluded. REUTERS

Sicilians launch dessert into space

Sicilian amateur scientists have launched a model cannolo, a cream-stuffed pastry roll symbolic of the Italian island, into the stratosphere, capturing bizarre images of the dessert flying far above the Earth.

The "Sicilian Space Program," which cost a rough total of 350 euros, had symbolic importance as well as being a scientific feat, the three natives of the island town of Enna behind it said. REUTERS

Women brewers taking beer world by storm

Not just men in charge. Many of the new microbreweries are led by women.

These days, women are heads of state, heads of government, Supreme Court judges, chief physicians and generals. But so far, the world of beer has remained a male domain.

That's changing. More and more women are drinking the amber brew, often opting for the increasing range of craft beers. According to a recent Alcoholic Beverage "DemandTracker" survey on alcoholic preferences in the United States, 51 percent of men describe beer as their preferred beverage, compared to 54 percent a year earlier.

More women are getting involved in the brewing process. / GETTY IMAGES

Meanwhile, 26 percent of women picked beer as their favorite poison, a rise of 2 percent from the previous year. In addition, 39 percent of women said they were drinking more beer thanks to "finding new brands."

SABMiller, the world's second-largest beer-maker, even has a new female master brewer. Katherine Smart, a former professor of brewing science appointed to the job last year, is now in charge of developing new flavors and brewing processes.

"Traditionally beer has been consumed by both men and women," said Smart. "One of the things I'd like to see happen is more women drinking it."

Quoted

"Historically, it was women who made [beer]."

Survey says

Norwegian men most helpful with housework

Norwegian men pitch in the most with housework and related chores while Japanese men do the least in a survey released by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development ahead of International Women's Day on Saturday.

In a comparison of statistics from most of the 34 OECD member countries concerning how much time adults of each sex spend on what the OECD calls "unpaid work," the organization concluded that "women are slowly closing the gap with men as more have careers."

"But there is still a huge gender gap in unpaid work, clearly showing that men are still struggling to lift much more than a finger from time to time in some countries," the Paris-based OECD said.

Turkish women spend the most time of any country in the survey doing unpaid chores such as housework or shopping, clocking up 377 minutes a day, while their male partners spend 116 minutes a day on such tasks.

Japanese men, who are the most unhelpful in this regard, spend 62 minutes a day on unpaid chores while their spouses devote almost 300 minutes a day.

On the flip side, "northern Europeans are the queens of leisure," with women in Norway spending more time relaxing and entertaining than anyone else, at 367 minutes a day, followed by British women who spend 339 minutes a day.

Norwegian men spend 180 minutes a day doing housework and their female partners still spend more time at it, putting in 210 minutes a day, the survey said.

Juicy J: Never Sober, but always hustling

Hip-hop. After 20 years in the game, Juicy J is finally the guy everyone's "Talkin' Bout."

If there's anyone who deserves to celebrate, it's Juicy J. "Dark Horse," his collaboration with Katy Perry, is everywhere — including the No. 2 position on the Billboard Hot 100 chart. And his new single, "Talkin' Bout," with Chris Brown and Wiz Khalifa, is creeping up, too. The 38-year-old rapper is staying true to the title of his latest gig, dubbed the Never Sober tour.

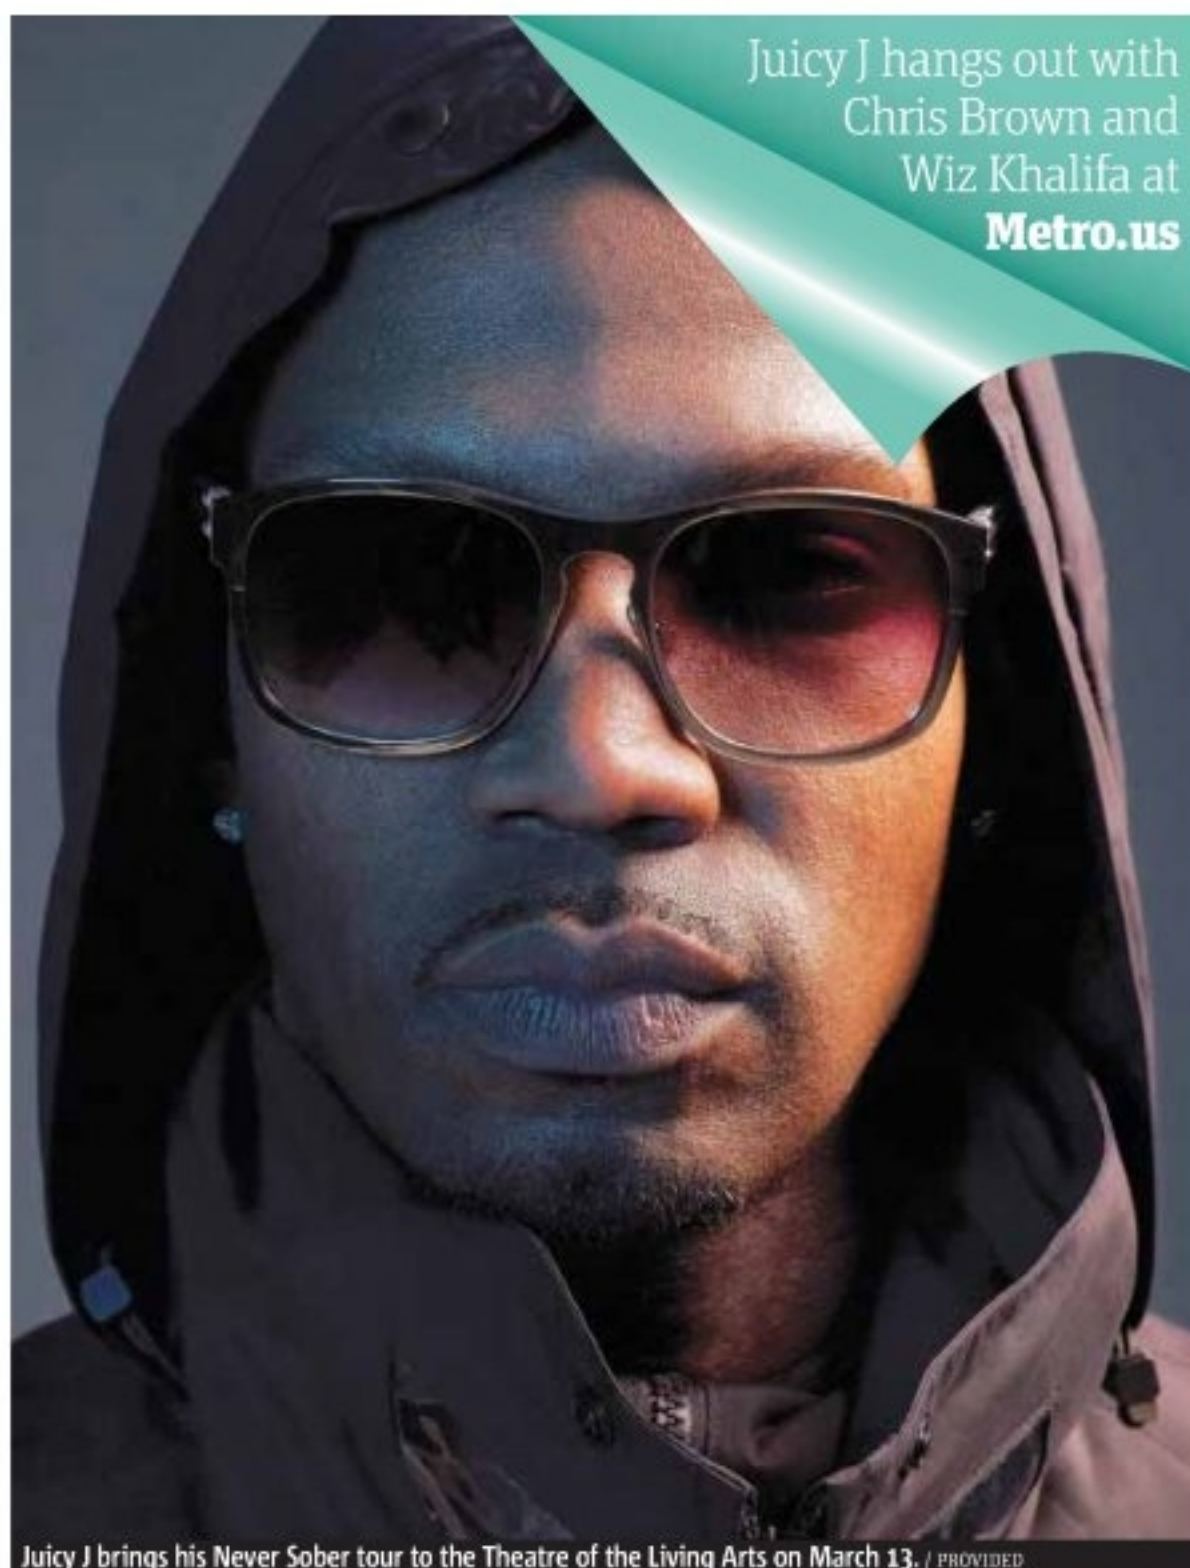

"I'm partying my ass off," he says.

But it took a lot of work to get to party like this. When he was just 13, he asked his mother, a librarian, to bring home all the books she could find about the music business.

"I read 10 or 15 books because I wanted to know everything about the music business," says the rapper. "A lot of artists just want to make music, get groupies and spend all the money, but that isn't what you're supposed to do. It's called the music business, and it's a business at the end of the day."

Juicy, who first found a taste of fame with Three 6 Mafia, says mixing business and pleasure comes naturally.

"I've been in the music game for over 20 years and won an Academy Award [in 2006 for 'It's Hard Out Here for a Pimp' from 'Hustle & Flow']. I still live a party and kicking-it life, but I'm working hard, too."

The pleasure part of the equation includes the aforementioned partying off of his ass.

"We have a lot of Ciroc vodka on the bus and some Hennessy and a couple bottles of champagne," he says. "If you're going to a Juicy J show, definitely drink some Ciroc. But don't drive! Let somebody drop you off or catch a limousine or something."

The business part of the equation includes a devoted work ethic. While on the road, Juicy J is making his next album, "The Hustle Continues," and he says it's about his journey from the 'hood to where he is now.

"We might be drinking some Ciroc on the tour bus, but I have a studio set up in there," he says. "I'm actually about to go make some beats right now."

The next level

When he released his album, "Stay Trippy," last summer, Juicy J coupled it with a video game where players threw dollars at strippers while streaming the album. It turns out his real life isn't much different.

• "If my life was a video game, it would definitely be a hustle," he says. "You'd have to hustle your way to the top and then you get to party your ass off. That's what I did."

Juicy rumors

Partying with co-workers or working with co-partiers?

Juicy has nothing but praise for his "Dark Horse" collaborator. "Katy Perry's a genius," he says. He has equal respect for Miley Cyrus, who he worked with on "#23." And when it comes to the rumors that emerged that Cyrus was pregnant with his baby, he says they laughed it off together. "That was just funny. People are always going to spread rumors online that aren't true. Miley's like my little sister, man!" he says.

BROKEN BELLS

Danger Mouse and James Mercer had such an easy time making their latest album, they might just do it again.

PSYCHEDELICS, BEE GEES
AND RELAXATION

Broken Bells are super producer Brian Burton, aka Danger Mouse/one-half of Gnarls Barkley, and James Mercer, lead singer of The Shins. Ironically, the Bells is where Mercer and Burton go for their rest and relaxation away from the industry. But rather than coming back with killer tans, they have produced an experimental collection of genre-busting tracks.

"The record reflects the hangover or comedown after the party," says Danger Mouse of their second album, "After the Disco," which came out earlier this year.

How long did it take you to make this album?

Brian Burton: Overall, this record took eight weeks.

James Mercer: It's crazy, man. Halfway through I

A bigger show

Is this a concerted effort to make Broken Bells more of a big deal?

Mercer: We want to have a bigger sort of show. We want to have something impressive happening, and we'll see how it works. It'll depend on whether people are loving the record and how big the record gets dictates how much we're willing to put in.

was thinking "It's kind of done." We had a record; I was shocked.

Burton: It makes me want to go back and do it again, to be honest. The hardest thing is the ending — doing the lyrics is the real f—ing hard s—.

James, you said in an interview: "We need to do another record, for sure. It's fun. I think [Danger Mouse] enjoys it too. It's like a vacation — although I don't want my wife to know that!" Does it feel like an affair of sorts?

Mercer: [Laughs] Like a musical affair or something — you get to run off. The thing that's cool about it is that we share the burden of all the creative parts. There's nowhere near the pressure that I feel doing something like The Shins or like Brian would feel doing a record on his own.

I'm not the only one to point out that there's a bit of a Bee Gees feel to the latest release. Were they an influence?

Mercer: It is kind of coincidental. We saw it too. I was in the vocal booth just tracking and doing a falsetto and that's what came out. I was doing track after track when I came into the control room and heard it played back with all those layers — that's the Bee Gees and that's how they did it.

Will you be getting the tight white suits out?

Mercer: [Laughs] I need a feathered wig. I can't grow the hair.

Bee Gees jokes aside, their music was not as complex as this. I found the first Broken Bells album got deeper after each repeated listen — such rich production. Brian, do you hide Easter eggs in albums to reward loyal listeners?

Burton: I definitely don't intend for that to be the case. I'd much rather everybody heard everything right off the jump.

The video is kind of psychedelic and trippy. Were you drinking mushroom tea while making the video?

Mercer: [Laughs] We love psychedelic music, and I'm not sure whether it's because I've taken psychedelic drugs or not. Maybe it's just coincidental.

Burton: Psychedelic music is just experimental with melodies. It hooks you in with things you can repeat or sing.

Eva Green kills and that's what matters

Side-sequel. The follow-up to "300" is a silly cash-in but its villain is a force of nature.

"300" committed one of the great sins of modern blockbusters: It ended with all of its main characters heroically dead. And isn't the impossibility of film sequels the real tragedy of the Battle of Thermopylae? But just as the great, ripped, gym bunny warriors' noble deaths inspired legions to rise against the orgy-rocking Persians, Zack Snyder's film — macho and overly color-corrected, both homophobic and homoerotic — has served to pump up athletes hitting the field and bros heading out on the town. Life had to find a way.

And so it has, sort of.

"300: Rise of an Empire" features 300 of nothing. It's not a sequel but a side-sequel (we refuse to use the term "sidequel"), occasionally cutting away to the first film in progress elsewhere. Execs scrambled through their history books and picked the less storied Battle of Artemisium, between the Greeks and another, different part of the Persian army. This one's at sea, and that ideally should make for less hand-to-hand blood-letting which, along with barked "St. Crispin Day" knockoff speeches, were all the first film had going for it.

But again, life finds a way, in this case by ignoring history and just redoing the first, by hook or crook. Snyder has aged into Superman pictures, but replacing director Noam Murro slavishly recreates his old style, even more than Snyder slavishly recreated Frank Miller's questionable comic. Our new shirtless, six pack-abed hero is Themistocles, played by Sullivan Stapleton, an actor who, sadly, lacks the shouty gravitas of Gerard Butler.

That's OK, though, because the one major difference from — and vast improvement over — the original is boasting a much more charismatic villain than tall, pierced, hermaphroditic and yet still dull Xerxes (Rodrigo Santoro). They found it in Artemisia, warrior queen, and in her portrayer, Eva Green. A refugee of both James Bond ("Casino Royale") and Bernardo Bertolucci ("The Dreamers"), Green has always had a thing for old school vamping. Here's the role she was born to play. Wide-eyed and hammy, her Artemisia lusts for blood the way nymphomaniacs do sex. She makes out with a freshly dislodged head, howls orgasmically as she hacks limbs and snarls her way through lines like, "You fight harder than you f—."

"300 II" does not deserve her, and when she's on-screen the movie doesn't know what hit it. She's far more compelling than the interchangeably ripped heroes, and the film winds up unsure who it's rooting for. All it can do is satiate its fanboys. By contrast, the first "300" was made by tasteful aesthetes. Even more than did Snyder, Murro knows his audience desires 3-D boobs in the second minute, blood splattering onto their glasses and screamed aphorisms (e.g., "Fear is freedom!") whose logic disintegrates the second after they're bellowed. It's so up front about placating fanboys that its honesty becomes, in a twisted, messed-up sense, admirable.

Elaine Stritch is still salty after all these years

Profile. A swearsy showbiz legend reflects and dishes out in a new documentary.

Elaine Stritch has made waves recently for speaking her mind, which has included swearing on live television. But to say that, at 89, she no longer cares whose toes she steps on would imply that she ever did. As the doc "Elaine Stritch: Shoot Me" reveals, she's always lived her life as though she had nothing to lose. She's made a career and reputation out of being bluntly honest, and therefore often "difficult." She might have had a rough career had she not had the talent to back up her tough talk.

Centered on the show-

A showbiz legend gets profiled in the documentary "Elaine Stritch: Shoot Me." / SUNDANCE SELECTS

biz legend doing what she has long threatened — that is, moving out of New York City, her longtime home — "Shoot Me" paints a loving but prickly and honest portrait of someone who's never been less than honest, if sometimes to a fault. (This doesn't mean she is retiring.) Since her Tony-winning show "Elaine Stritch at Liberty," she's been honest about her illnesses and her alcoholism. (She was sober for more than two decades, and today enjoys a daily cocktail.)

"Shoot Me" is a continuation of everything she's worked for. What all of her talking heads — including Tina Fey, Alec Baldwin, who played her son on "30 Rock" and Stephen Sondheim, who wrote her signature tune "The Ladies Who Lunch" for her — have in common is a mix of love and weariness. Their testimonies are almost the same, word-for-word: Elaine Stritch can be a pain, but she is definitely worth it — a statement said through apparent shellshock. Stritch even gives the filmmakers a hard time, at one point snipping at the cameraman for pushing the camera too close to her. James Gandolfini swings by to say, with a huge smile, that, had they come through the ranks at the same time, "We would have had a torrid love affair that would have ended badly."

Such comments aren't little character assassinations; they're part of what makes her unique and great. And Stritch is more sweet than salty. She tells it like it is, but she's no blowhard, and most of what "it" is winds up being positive. She's a life force whose every interaction feels like a roller coaster. Stritch is such an open performer that anything she's done, even the occasional fiction film — including the late Alain Resnais' excellent, hard-to-find 1977 art film "Providence," which paired her with greats like John Gielgud and Dirk Bogarde — can't help but have chunks of the real Stritch in it. "Shoot Me" isn't the last word on its subject, nor wants to be. But anything with Stritch is inevitably, to a point, priceless.

'Mr. Peabody & Sherman'

Director: Rob Minkoff

Voices of: Ty Burrell, Max Charles

Rating: PG

"Rocky and Bullwinkle" segment stars Sherman and Peabody gallivant through Ancient Egypt. / DREAMWORKS ANIMATION

Kind of a dog

Kiddie fare. A snappy "Rocky and Bullwinkle" segment gets its own unimaginative movie treatment.

The makers of "Mr. Peabody & Sherman" were smart to realize one thing: If you're going to make a feature length film based on the titular "Rocky and Bullwinkle" segment, you might as well make it a whole hog time travel movie. The shows were little history lessons, with the Wayback Machine the mere device to send the canine brainiac and his quiz-zical adoptee back in time. The movie reverses this. It has very little educational value (same with the show, to be honest). It's essentially "Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure," only with more heart.

And therein lies the less smart thing about "Mr. Peabody & Sherman." Doing "Bill and Ted" again, only with more life lessons, makes two unimaginative things rolled into one pricey franchise launcher. Here, boy Sherman (voice of Max Charles) takes the (of course) souped-up Wayback Machine for a joy ride, only to accumulate multiple historical personages. Eventually the film starts cribbing from other time travel pictures. Sherman winds up creating multiple time lines, and with them multiple Shermans.

But as soon as it seems

"Mr. Peabody & Sherman" may get really loopy and turn into a kiddie "Primer," it backs off. It doesn't have the madcap-ness to fully exploit a potentially nutty premise. It has the entirety of history at its disposal, but it can't give Agamemnon (Patrick Warburton), Mona Lisa (Lake Bell) or even Sigmund Freud (Mel Brooks!) anything to do. Instead, it tends to lessons of tolerance and Peabody learning to be more emotionally available to the kid he's raised as his own. If you ever thought that semi-sincere message-mongering has destroyed many a family picture, then here's another example.

Documentary. Ballerina Tanaquil Le Clercq gets a gentle profile with 'Afternoon of a Faun.'

Lives are knotty and complex, and many biographical documentaries get so bogged down with the burden of exposition that they're forced to neglect aesthetics. The life of legendary dancer Tanaquil Le Clercq is not one of those. It's so simple it could be mistaken for one of the tragic stories that inspired her routines.

A teenage prodigy, Le Clercq became a principal in the New York City Ballet. She was muse to not one but two impresarios: George Balanchine and Jerome Robbins. At only 27, she was felled by polio. It didn't kill her. Instead, she stuck around into her 70s, a reminder of the greatness that could have lasted.

Named after one of Robbins' pieces, "Afternoon of a Faun" instantly takes the pace of a Le Clercq dance: slow and graceful, contemplative, hushed. There are the occasional, obligatory talking heads, but most of the time the images stick on Le Clercq, be they her dances or still photos.

Director Nancy Buirski aims for elegance, though she doesn't completely have the chops to pull it off. The pacing can be choppy, overly reliant on light piano work to smooth over any fits of editorial gracelessness.

Dancer Tanaquil Le Clercq is seen here with George Balanchine.
KINO LORBER INC.

But as the film goes on, the filmmaking seems to get better, especially once it gets into Le Clercq's initial incapacitation after illness hits. Here, Buirski digs up footage from the past of people encased in iron lungs or floating in nebulous wonderlands — outside-the-box visual cues that turn the film momentarily phantasmagoric.

Art in 'Full Bloom'

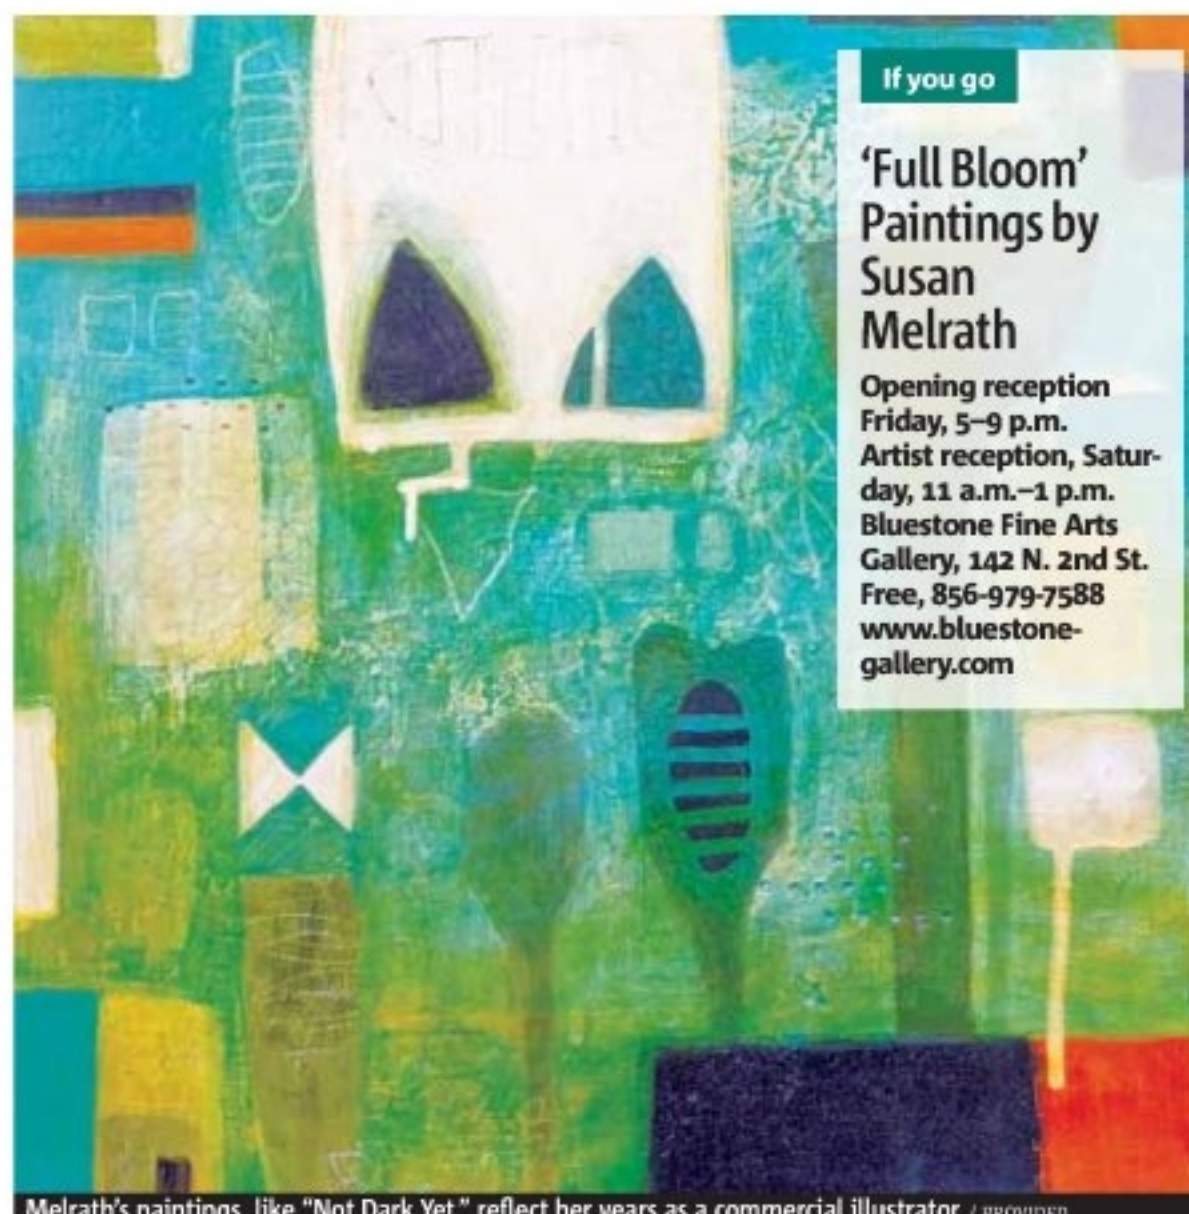

Gallery. The Flower Show may be wrapping up soon, but this floral exhibit is just opening.

When painter Susan Melrath was growing up in Oxford, Pa., her mother worked as a professional floral designer.

"I remember the smell of her hands after work, like fresh greenery. There were always clippers in the glove box, because you never knew when you might find the perfect clipping," says Melrath, from her studio just outside of Seattle. "I can't tell you how many times she would slam on the breaks and say, 'Would you just look at that beautiful Queen Anne's Lace?'"

Melrath's latest collection, "Full Bloom," is opening at Bluestone Fine Arts Gallery in Old City. The dozen or so abstract paintings are inspired by the flora of her youth. But between Oxford and Seattle is a 30-year career in art, including many years spent exclusively as a commercial artist and illustrator.

All of Melrath's work — figurative, landscape, watercolor, sculpture and even custom-designed dog collars — bears the imprint of her career in illustration. And "Full Bloom" is no different. There is a graphic, almost symmetrical, but playful quality to Melrath's garden — all qualities of a good illustration.

But she didn't get there right away. There were many months of struggling to express her emotional connection to nature.

"Early on I was doing realistic watercolors. But they just looked like every other watercolor of flowers you've ever seen," she says. "I just felt like I needed a more authentic approach. I wanted to find how I felt about the flowers rather than just duplicating what I was seeing."

Inspiration was finally delivered through her iPhone: An app called "Brushes" allowed her to toy endlessly with abstract design and color. While none of her phone compositions turned into specific paintings, a spark was definitely struck.

"It was so much fun! And I thought, why can't I do that on a canvas?" she explains. "Suddenly, I was painting more spontaneously. ... Just like my mother arranges her flowers, I'm arranging these colors and shapes on a canvas."

THERESA CAPUTO

The "Long Island Medium" reads airwaves — and is back on them.

BREAK ON THROUGH TO THE OTHER SIDE

You can win a reading with Caputo (the wait list is several years!) by tweeting with the hashtag #LongIslandMedium from 8-11 p.m. on Sunday. Caputo will randomly select winners during live segments within the commercial breaks and will announce them on the air. / GETTY IMAGES

Theresa Caputo, better known to many as the Long Island Medium, is back on Sunday night with new episodes of her hit series, now entering its fifth season. In "Long Island Medium: On the Road," Caputo travels the country, surprising people with readings about their deceased loved ones (she even does one at a prison). But the drama also unfolds closer to home, with Caputo learning of her daughter's desire to try pole dancing, and deciding to — possibly — change up her famous hairdo. The medium is so busy, we couldn't even get her on the phone for an interview, but she did find some time to respond to our questions via email.

What's the hardest part of balancing your show, family, clients and spirit?
Finding enough time in

Bonus question

What can we look forward to this season? Is there really a change to your signature hairstyle?

You will just have to wait and see on March 9 on TLC. LOL! Change is in the eye of the beholder :)

the day to connect with everyone!

What are you seeing or hearing when you're getting messages from the other side?

I see shadows and silhouettes. I feel the emotional bond that you shared with them and the way that they passed. I also feel my clients' emotions — their sadness, guilt, grief — and any burdens they might be carrying.

What are some of your favorite moments you've had reading people?

I feel that every reading is special and unique and has its own amazing moment. The most amazing moment for me in every reading is watching the transformation from sadness, grief and sorrow to happiness, joy and laughter.

What do you say to skeptics?

Listen, everyone is entitled to their own beliefs, but this isn't about me. This is about spirits validating to each and every one of us that there truly is more to life than just here in the physical world, and that they are still here with us just in a different way.

A spring wedding for Kimye

"I can't believe I'm engaged!" Kim Kardashian exclaimed on a recent episode of "Keeping Up with the Kardashians." I wonder if she said that the other two times.

Maybe the third time is a charm. Kim and Kanye West, who were engaged last October in a spectacle rivaled only by Super Bowl halftime shows, have allegedly set a wedding date for May 24.

Rumors have it that the rapper and reality show star will still wed in Paris, even after they found out the Palace of Versailles was booked solid. We hear the wedding will be "intimate," with about 150 people. How many of those will be photographers?

Talking points

Armstrong's arm candy

Lance Armstrong was reportedly advised to ditch Ashley Olsen when the pair briefly dated back in 2007, according to "Cycle of Lies," the new Armstrong tell-all book. John Koriath, head of Armstrong's Livestrong Foundation, "warned the 36-year-old father of three that his May-December romance could damage his cancer work," Julie Macur writes in the book. "'Whoa, dude, bad idea,' Koriath said. 'You've got to put a stop to this right now.'" Armstrong apparently didn't appreciate the relationship advice. "She's 21," he reportedly responded. "F— you." But the relationship fizzled out after a few months anyway, with Armstrong moving on to Kate Hudson.

J-Law is still a winner

Jennifer Lawrence went home empty-handed from the Oscars last weekend, but apparently that's just fine as far as she's concerned. "Jennifer said she was so relieved she didn't win because she didn't want to go through what Anne Hathaway experienced. She's very aware that the backlash is already coming anyway," a source tells Radar Online. "She was sort of joking because her and Anne are actually friends, but she just knew that if she won the Oscar again it'd be like a target on her back."

Is Oprah really helping Lindsay Lohan?

Oprah's tough love with troubled star Lindsay Lohan was on full display in a two-minute teaser trailer released for her reality series "Lindsay," set to debut on Oprah's OWN network this Sunday. In the clip, Winfrey is trying to get Lohan to sit for an interview, but runs into countless obstacles. Oprah is not one to let an obstacle get in her way, and she tells Lindsay to "cut the bulls—."

But many of the half-million who have viewed the clip online are saying the legendary host is exploiting Lindsay and that if she really wanted to help her, she'd do it behind the cameras.

This reality show is allegedly different from your typical down-and-out celeb trying to not be so down and/or out. The cameras won't be filming LiLo getting her eyebrows waxed or taking her dog to be fluffed out (we hope). There are interviews with her sober coach (he hesitates when asked if Lindsay is clean), her father (Lindsay tells him he wasn't good for her in her life) and confessionals where she admits she feels like a prisoner.

Normally, I'd be saying "Boo-efing-hoo" but I'm actually rooting for Lindsay. There is some real talent deep down inside and her intentions seem genuine. And yes, that talent may soon be squandered on "Two Broke Girls," where she will guest star on the April 14 episode, but it's talent nonetheless.

Will we see a new side of LiLo?

Lying company gets under Ray Liotta's skin

First of all, where has Ray Liotta been? A visit to his Wikipedia page answers that question: Everywhere! Dude has been in 11 things in the past two years and is working on at least nine projects in 2014 alone. Guess it just wasn't anything that we saw.

But this week he's in the news for another reason. Turns out, Henry Hill is suing a skin care company called Nerium International, according to TMZ. Apparently, the Texas-based company is saying Liotta used its Nerium AD cream and now his face is as smooth as a baby's butt.

One problem, though: Liotta says he never used the cream and that he never gave the company permission to use his likeness. Nerium's slogan is "Real Science, Real Results," but maybe the fine print should be "not real actors who use the product."

Soaring Flyers are happy to stand pat

NHL. The Flyers have moved up the standings without moving too much of their roster.

There was no panic, nor was there a roster shake up, way back at a point when panic and roster shaking would've seemed perfectly acceptable.

So if Paul Holmgren didn't do it when the Flyers were 1-7, had just fired their coach and seemed like a dead team skating, he wasn't about to do it at the NHL trade deadline.

Other than bringing in a young Andrew MacDonald and shipping out an older, more banged up Andrej Meszaros, the lineup the Flyers will go with down the homestretch is exactly the same one they've had all season.

A few months from now we'll see how it all plays out, but it's hard to argue Holmgren is making a mistake essentially standing pat — especially since the Flyers are now 32-17-6 since that 1-7 start.

"As I've said all along I like our team," Holmgren said after the deadline passed. "I think we address our defense and improved our defense with Andrew [MacDonald]. We're ready to go now."

After completing a home-and-home sweep of the Capitals with a wild 6-4 win Wednesday the Flyers have moved into second in the Metropolitan Division with 72 points — and potential first round home ice advantage. Despite winning seven of their last eight, going back to before the Olympic break, they're hardly secure.

The Rangers are just two points behind, followed by Columbus (69), the Caps (68) and the Devils (67). The top three in each division automatically qualify, with the final two wild card spots determined among the rest regardless of division. They're hoping keeping the lineup intact keeps the continuity going.

"It's nice to have the same group of guys," rookie Michael Raffl said. "We've been playing together for months now. We know each other really well and think we really can achieve something here."

Fitting in

MacDonald making transition to Flyers defense

Blending new defenseman Andrew MacDonald in with the Flyers' core is the next order of business for Philadelphia.

With just two games in the next nine days before the schedule picks up Flyers head coach Craig Berube should get that opportunity.

The word on the 27-year-old, acquired from the Islanders for a couple of high draft choices and Phantoms' forward Matt Mangene, is that he's a premier shot blocker who can handle the puck.

Berube wasted little time throwing him into battle and was pleased with the early results. So was the new guy.

"I think the most important thing is just to keep it simple and rely on what got you here," said MacDonald, who'll be a free agent this summer, although the likelihood is the Flyers will try to re-sign him. "Use the skills that you have and try to apply them. But you have to get used to playing with different guys on defense no matter what team you're on."

Ruiz goes deep in loss

Not that it matters, but for anyone keeping track the Phillies are 1-6-1 in Grapefruit League play, the worst record in the majors.

There were three bright spots in Thursday's 4-3 loss to the Yankees as Carlos Ruiz, John Mayberry Jr. and Freddy Galvis hit solo home runs. Kyle Kendrick pitched three innings, allowed one run and struck out two.

Hamels could miss month with dead arm

MLB. Cole Hamels plans to rest tired arm for at least a week before he pitches again.

Cole Hamels won't just miss a start or two when the season commences. The Phillies young left-handed ace may miss much of April. Hamels, who has been slowed thanks to biceps tendinitis, was scheduled to face live hitters Thursday for the first time this spring.

However, his tired $144 million arm, will be rested instead of tested.

"Everything was on schedule," Hamels said. "But after the last bullpen [Saturday] my arm was just fatigued out. The muscles weren't able to fire the way I'm used to."

There is no pain, according to Hamels.

"I'm just tired," Hamels said. "I felt good throwing the bullpen. I actually felt great. Things were working. I just pushed it a little hard too quickly. After throwing 35 pitches, my

- "I'm not going to push it," Hamels said. "I want to build this up and be ready for the long haul."

body felt like I threw 1,000 pitches. So now I'm allowing my body to catch up."

There is no MRI scheduled. Hamels will not receive a cortisone shot. The only prescription for Hamels is rest.

"I think that will do it," Hamels said. "Right now I have 'dead arm' or 'frozen arm.' The shoulder doesn't want to throw the ball and throw it with the type of strength you need."

Hamels believes his rigorous spring training regimen followed by the lack of offseason workouts due to the shoulder tendinitis has caused the exhaustion, which ultimately could put a damper on the Phillies season.

"The Phillies need everything to go right," MLB analyst Dan Plesac said. "If something goes wrong with one of their key players, like Cole Hamels, Ryan Howard or Cliff Lee, that could be big trouble."

The silver lining for now is that Hamels claims there is no inflammation or pain. Hamels could throw off the mound next week at the earliest.

The best case scenario for the Phillies is that Hamels will be considerably behind the rest of the rotation.

Ryan Howard took the news in stride.

"It could be worse, much worse," Howard said. "First off, Cole is just tired. He's not hurt. I would rather him build up the strength in his arm and miss a couple of starts at the beginning of the season rather than him miss the end of the season when we're making a run at the playoffs. We need Cole. There's no doubt about it but he'll be with us. We just don't know when that will be."

BALLPARK FACTOR

A wise man once explained the difference between a .250 hitter and a .300 guy is one extra "dying quail" that goes for a hit a week. "Just one," Crash Davis said in "Bull Durham."

That was merely a movie, but fantasy owners who aren't paying attention to scenery changes are asking to get burned.

Certain ballparks yield more hits and certain lineups create better opportunities. It adds up to far more than that one hit a week. These guys in new places will be overdrafted because owners will be chasing last year's stats, not being predictive.

a no-brainer move for his wallet, but it's an atrocious move for his box scores.

Last year, Safeco Field ranked 21st in adjusted home run rate, while Yankee Stadium was ninth. Additionally, Safeco is especially bad for a left-handed power hitter, as it's 331 feet down the left-field line.

Cano was accustomed to 318 feet of the Bronx's friendly confines. And finally, he leaves the protection of the Yankees' annually stacked lineup.

Motown blues

Ian Kinsler isn't in as bad shape as Cano because the lineup he's joining in Detroit is just as strong as the one he left in Texas. But he still gets a

MLB. Phillies' search for fifth starting pitcher continues

The Phillies are in a quandary since a fifth starter is needed. Ryne Sandberg thought that his team would be able to get by when Hamels was slated to only miss two starts due to off days. But the scenario has changed.

Cliff Lee is a virtual lock to start the opening day game in Texas. A.J. Burnett will follow. Kyle Kendrick is now the number three starter and Roberto Hernandez will be in the fourth slot.

The fifth starter is a mystery for now. Jonathan Pettibone is hurt. Miguel Alfredo Gonzalez, who is pitching for the first time in two years, doesn't appear ready to start the season in the majors. General manager Ruben Amaro Jr. has stressed that Jesse Biddle will start the season in the minors.

"Someone in this organization is going to have to step up," Kendrick said. "We have arms. It's just a matter of who it will be."

Vegas gives odds 76ers finish 0-36

After starting the season with a 12-21 mark, the Sixers have gone 3-25 since, dropping their last 15 games in a row with the Jazz in town Saturday.

Could the Sixers possibly go the rest of the season without another win?

According to the Las Vegas gambling site Bovada, the 76ers have 3-1 odds to go 0-36 to finish the season.

A winless finish for Philadelphia would shatter Cleveland's record of 26 losses in a row set in 2010-11. METRO

Lidge, who helped lead the Phillies to a 2008 World Series championship with a perfect 48-48 in save opportunities, is working on his Master's degree in Roman archeology from the University of Leicester in England.

"That's where I'm at now," Lidge said. "I was flattered to possibly be a part of the Phillies broadcast but I'm not ready for that commitment. I'm doing stuff for MLB radio. The great thing about that is that I can do it from home. PUBLISHERS NOTE

All real estate advertising herein is subject to the Federal Fair Housing Act of 1968 and state and local fair housing laws. The Fair Housing Act makes it illegal to advertise any preference, limitation or discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, handicap, familial status, or national origin or an intention to make any such preference, limitation or discrimination. State or local laws may make unlawful advertising that discriminates on the basis of age, marital status, or sexual orientation. Metro US will not knowingly accept any advertising for real estate which violates the law. The law requires that all dwellings advertised are available on an equal opportunity basis. If you have any questions regarding housing discrimination, call the Long Island Housing Services at (1-800) 660-6920 in Long Island or the Anti-Discrimination Center at (212) 346-7600 in New York City. To file a complaint call HUD toll-free at (800) 669-9777 or the New York City Commission on Human Rights at (212) 306-7500.
